Roger Babson vs. Karl Marx

The Contradiction Between Socialized Production and Individual Enterprise

By DANIEL HORSLEY

All over the world a paradox confronts the bourgeoisie. Everywhere you go you get a feeling that the new age is at hand; everywhere you can see the outline of a dream, a dream of a better world. Everywhere you can see the shadow of a new society, a society where the individual is free to develop his own individuality, a society where the individual is free to develop his own individuality.

The world is a little physical, fitting the human animal to its purposes.

On the one hand is the bourgeoisie, who stand in the way of that dream.

The world is a little physical, fitting the human animal to its purposes.

On the one hand is the bourgeoisie, who stand in the way of that dream.

Factory-Girls Preserve the Ashes of Their Former Boss in a Glass Urn Just to Show Appreciation.

By Paul Klins

There was a little gray-green factory in a small town in Michigan. The owner was a bachelor. There were a dozen young clerks, all of them with the same hair color, and a dozen young girls, including the girls' former employer.

One of the girls was a popular figure among the workers. She was a good talker, and always had something interesting to say. She enjoyed telling stories about her past, and was always willing to share them with others. She was also very good at getting along with people, and was always willing to help others out when they needed it.

Another of the girls was a quiet one. She didn't like talking much, but she was always there to lend a helping hand. She was very good at her job, and was always willing to help others out when they needed it.

The third girl was a very clever one. She was always thinking up ways to get ahead, and was always looking for ways to improve her lot in life. She was very good at her job, and was always willing to help others out when they needed it.

The girls all worked hard, and were very good at their jobs. They were all very pleased with their work, and were always willing to do their best to make the factory a success.

The owner of the factory was a hard one. He was always looking for ways to cut costs, and was always trying to get the girls to work harder. He was always looking for ways to improve the factory, and was always willing to do anything to make it a success.

The girls all liked working for the owner, and were always willing to do their best to make the factory a success.
